Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada: Douglas & McIntyre, Limited, Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada, 1997. Hardcover. Condition: New. Dust Jacket Condition: New. Signed by David Suzuki. Book Description: "Consume and compete!" The message of the economic treadmill is loud and constant. But in this seminal work, David Suzuki argues that the real bottom line, and society's challenge today, is not debts and deficits, but the need to live full and meaningful lives without destroying the Earth's biosphere, which supports all life. Suzuki explores the physical, social, and spiritual needs that form the basis of any society that aspires to a sustainable future and a high quality life for its citizens. Those fundamental requirements are rooted in the Earth and its life support systems. They are worthy of reverence and respect; they are sacred. In an inspiring and uplifting, David Suzuki explains our biological needs, which include dependence on air, water, soil, and the sun's energy--and a fifth vital need, the diversity of life itself. Suzuki shows how these elements connect us to each other and to the Earth and how human beings have a genetically programmed need to live with other species. THE SACRED BALANCE offers the seeds of a new direction for us all. About the Author David Suzuki has written numerous books, including Genethics, Wisdom of the Elders, Metamorphosis and The Japan We Never Knew, and is the founder and chair of the David Suzuki Foundation. He lives in Vancouver, British Columbia. A writer for more than 100 documentary films, Amanda McConnell lives in Toronto, Ontario. Signed by Author(s).
