Excerpt: .of February, and affected the country as well as town. Total buried this year one thousand eight hundred and twenty-seven. SPRING, 1748. March. Alternately wet, windy, fair, cloudy, cold, and how, and mild weather. The winds accordingly variable. April. The first seventeen days for the most part unseasonably cold and dry, and a very backward spring: little of falling weather, except hail, which was frequent, and the winds N. W. and N. E. thence to the end of the month warmer, with frequent showers, and the winds generally S.W. and S. E. May. The rainy weather from the end of last month continued at times the first eleven days of this: thence to the twentyfirst mostly fair: thence to the end of the month month often cloudy and wet. The principal wind S. W. Often very warm through the month. The spring was healthful, though a few pleurisies and inflammatory fevers, and some few agues were interspersed. In May the bills of mortality were extremely small, viz. seventeen and nineteen; yet, though an extraordinary warmth attended this month, it was not free from tumours of the jaws, and colds. S U M M E R. June. The cloudy, windy, and cool weather closing the last month, continued the first six days of this, and the wind mostly S. W. thence to the end of the month very warm and dry, and the principal winds S. E. N. E. and E. Some rain at the end....
