Not illustrated. 1922 Excerpt: . . . by cutting out the poorest trees, thereby allowing the better ones to grow more naturally. Even in new planting, the trees are still being planted too closely. Three trees to the hundred feet, is the minimum spacing desirable. A distance of forty feet between trees is better. Close planting produces so much shade along the streets, that it is impossible to grow any satisfactory kind of turf in the parking strip. They should be staggered on opposite sides of the street. Parking Strips--The parking strips for trees should not be too narrow. Many trees develop trunks thirty-six inches and more in diameter, and the surface root systems spread out to at least double this distance. For proper ultimate growth, a width of six feet is not too much for the parking strip. Lesser widths force the sidewalks and curbs out of place. Trees will die if...

Reviews

These types of publication is the greatest publication available. It really is filled with knowledge and wisdom Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.

-- Prof. Lenna Beatty III

Without doubt, this is actually the best job by any publisher. It is written in basic phrases instead of difficult to understand. You will like the way the author publish this publication.
