

The New Joy of Photography

By Eastman Kodak Company

Old Tappan, New Jersey, U.S.A.: Addison-Wesley, 1985. Soft cover. Condition: New. 301 Pages From School Library Journal YA This updated edition describes advances in photographic equipment and techniques in use since the first edition six years ago. There is information on the newest cameras, on new film speeds, darkroom techniques and the latest accessories. The basics of photography are all here, too. Illustrations with informative captions help in the study of photographing people, action, nature, landscapes, still life, architecture, as well as photojournalism, underwater photography, taking photos in inclement weather and using special effects. Of the 500 full-color photographs, the nature pictures are especially outstanding. A labeled picture of a darkroom is an effective opener for the information on processing and making prints of both color and black-and-white film. Basic printing controls and creative darkroom effects include step-by-step instructions. Last of all, pointers are given on caring for and displaying one's photos. Camera and hobby clubs should find this an engrossing and informative text. Included are portfolios from Annie Leibovitz, Harry Callahan and Eliot Porter to illustrate three distinctive styles.
