Excerpt from Intestinal Auto-Intoxication: Together With an Appendix on the Lactic Ferments With Particular Reference to Their Application in Intestinal Therapeutics We must, therefore, if we wish to be faithful to this definition Of auto-intoxication (as we understand it), eliminate from our study all toxemias in which the toxic substances have been produced outside of the body and even those in which the toxins have been formed within the body, but under the influence Of microbes introduced accidentally from without. Many authors have extended the limits Of auto-intoxication much beyond those we assign to it here; for that reason we must examine and discuss the pathogeny of all these conditions, so as to remain within the limits Of our subject.
