Forgotten Books, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Methods Employed at the Naples Zoological Station for the Preservation of Marine Animals The smaller building is used for receiving, preserving, and storing the material brought in from day to day, and for laboratories and study rooms for some of the officials and others. The aquarium proper contains twenty-six tanks having glass fronts and lighted from above in such a manner that, as a person gazes into them, he can readily imagine himself standing on the bottom of the sea with the animals at home about him. There are no open tanks and no light enters the room except that which comes through the water. The stocking of the aquarium and the supply of material for the naturalists at work in the station is cared for in a very complete way. The station owns two steam launches, which are used for dredging and other heavy or distant work, and two or more small rowboats, which are kept constantly busy collecting jelly-fish and other surface forms of life which are driven into the harbor from the open sea. Furthermore, all the fishermen in the bay regularly bring to the station all the animals that come up in their nets that are known to be desired. These objects are paid for as they are brought in. Every day the naturalists state what they need for the next days work, and every evening corresponding orders are given to the crews of the boats belonging to the station. One naturalist may want fifty sea-urchins of a kind, another twenty-five starfish, another a larger small number of jelly-fish or crustaceans or what not, and each finds his wants supplied...
