Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Common School Education: An Address Delivered Before the School Society, Plymouth, December 12, 1842 Having recently given a report of the doings of your examining Committee, and offered some remarks upon the importance of doing more to elevate the standard of common school education, I invite your attention, at this time, to a more extended consideration of the subject. The interest manifested on the part of several members of this society, encourages the belief that onward! will be hailed by you as the cheering watchword in the enterprise of a thorough general education. Some will say this subject has been sufficiently discussed. Not so! The discussion has scarcely commenced. More is said in one form and another, by those concerned, upon raising ruta-bagas, training cattle, and the like sciences, than upon the best methods of cultivating the minds of children. True, most men have more domestic animals than children; but few, I believe, would consider the intrinsic value of improvement in the one case at all comparable to the importance of a right education in the other: yet facts will warrant the assertion, that in our farming communities generally, a lecturer will have more hearers, a newspaper more readers, treating upon agriculture than upon the manner of instructing and training the scholars of those communities. While at the same time the parents, who are laudably engaged in successfully managing their farms, are laboring for their children - to make their children prosperous and happy in the world. Until quite recently improvement in our schools has by no means kept pace with improvement in every thing else; nor in but few places is the subject now...
