Each essay is based upon a personal understanding and/or the use of reason to establish a conclusion that uncovers the covered. Each essay seeks to prepare the mind to be induced to pursue the subject in further depth. They are written in such a manner to insure a full understanding and leave no doubt as to what is being expressed. The SmaragdineTable, an essay by Hermes Trismegistis, is exceptional to the point of being remarkable in its effort to reveal how the world and its contents were created. This essay and the analysis alone is awakening and magnetizing, leaving further curiosity to pursue the absence of the unknown.
