The height of the pier is such that a concave-grating spectrograph of 21 feet radius or a plane-grating spectrograph of 30 feet focal length may be employed if desired. The whole pier is inclosed by an outer concrete wall and roof to assist in maintaining a constant temperature. The telescope pier itself is hollow in construction, with three heavily reinforced floors running across it at different elevations. The walls are also strongly reinforced and further strengthened by four buttresses on the outside, two each on the east and west sides. The first floor, at a distance of 16 feet from the ground, is designed to carry a large water-tank, which will form the reservoir for the watercirculation system enveloping the 100-inch mirror. At a height of 25 feet is the floor on which the driving-clock, worm-gear, and quick-motion right-ascension mechanism will stand. At the northern end on this floor is the room planned for the silvering of the large mirror. The electric elevator used for handling the mirror moves up and down through an opening 14 feet in diameter near the Center of the pier. The top of the pier consists of a circular concrete floor 11 inches thick and 53 feet 10 inches in diameter. On the east and west sides it is supported by massive reinforced concrete brackets extending outward from the pier. A metal wall about 8 feet high reaches from the edge of...
