Excerpt from The Church of Thibet: And the Historical Analogies of Buddhism and Christianity, a Lecture Delivered Before the Students Literary and Scientific Society, in the Framji Cowasji Intitution, Bombay, The materials for this lecture were derived, as stated in the text, from sources which are accessible to everybody. My chief obligations are due to Burnouf. Lassen, and Keoppen, more particularly the last, without whose aid my lecture could certainly never have been written. I can well believe that I have fallen into some errors in my exposition of Buddhist theology, as matters of this kind are open to much dispute, and probably there have been recent additions to our knowledge of this subject with which I am unacquainted. For the purpose, however, which I had in view, minute accuracy was unessential. In the comparative study of religious phenomena the most obvious and general facts are the most important. I cannot guess whether any of my Brahmanic friends and hearers were displeased with the freedom of my references to the Brahmanic gods, and the system of caste. Probably they have become so...

Reviews

Basically no phrases to clarify. It really is writter in straightforward phrases rather than hard to understand. You will not sense monotony at at any moment of your own time (that's what catalogues are for concerning if you ask me).

-- Doris Beier

It in just one of the best publication. This can be for anyone who statte that there was not a well worth reading through. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.
