An irretrievable step is an espionage thriller; its plot relates the adventures of Doron Seri an Israeli junior IDF officer who is persuaded to join the Mossad, his countrys intelligence service against his will, through sophisticated tactics that leaves him no other choice, but to volunteer to serve his country as a secret agent in an enemy state. He is signed on a contract of seven years, and after two preparative years in Israel he is sent to Italy under a new identity, where he meets Bianca Conti, marries her and takes her with him to Egypt; where they serve as a team. The plots background is the nationalization of the Suez Canal during the late fifties of the previous century, and the invasion of the Suez Canal zone by the British and French The short paragraph of my book below, endows the reader a glimpse of the plot: On his way to town he remembered with sudden alarm that he had to call them and fix the place and time, but he forgot all about it due to that piece of information about the agent that was caught in Damascus no doubt. Thus he headed again to Eliot Caf, and reached it at six fifty three pm. He hoped they will miss him and he wont hear from them ever again. But at seven pm sharp the same young man the one named Gad, which he met at the first meeting at Eliot Caf, has arrived this time with a middle aged tall man. He stood up to welcome them but Gad muttered lets go and they went outside to a van that was waiting for them....
