He who listeneth to my counsels shall never be confounded: they that do my works shall not sin. They that open me to the people shall have everlasting life. p 23. All these things relate to the book of life, to the testimony of the Most High, to the acknowledgment of the truth. Moses gave out the law, with the precepts of righteousness, and with promises for the house of Jacob to inherit. q (24. ) God sware unto David his servant, that out of his posterity he would raise up a mighty one to be king, who should sit on. his throne for ever. 25. This is he who filleth his people with wisdom as the river Physon, and as Tigris in the time of floods: 26. who filleth the understanding as Euphrates, who shall increase even as Jordan...
