The natural history of these canonicals, had it been preserved, would be a matter of the deepest interest. If the events have been properly synchronized, the Episcopal toggery must have been manufactured for him in Baltimore before he began this, his first official tour. Whether home-made or tailor-made, and other questions germane, could have been historically settled. Perhaps this was not the first time the suit was worn--it is at least the first recorded instance. Snethen naively says: No habit could be more inconvenient for a horseman, and the want of a vestry, or dressing-room, to the iDr. Scnddcr, in his American Methodism, 8vo, cloth, 1870, illustrated, furnishes a conspicuous instance how pseudo-Methodist historians draw upon their imagination for their facts. In Chap. XII. , he describes at length the substance of an interview between Asbury and Lee at this time, so...
