When a child believes he is bad, he behaves badly--and parents react badly, which will only reinforce the child s belief that he is bad. But confident parents can break this cycle and improve their child s misbehavior, says child development specialist Bonnie Harris. Using Harris s eight parenting principles designed to help children succeed, parents will learn the following truths: - my child wants to be successful - behavior is the signal to my child s emotional state - inappropriate behavior means my child is having a problem, not being a problem - my needs are no more or no less important than my child s - I accept my child as a competent and unique individual - the behavior I focus on grows - I need to say what my child can hear - good discipline requires connection - punishment breaks connection Putting these principles to work allows parents to abandon the typical reward and punishment system of discipline (which alienates child and parent), and replace it with a more compassionate, successful approach that brings parent and child together. With Harris s plan, parents will gain the confidence and skills to raise remarkable kids they will love to live with--and vice versa.
