

Heterographies: Sexual Difference in French Autobiography (Hardback)

By Alex Hughes

Bloomsbury Publishing PLC, United Kingdom, 1999. Hardback. Book Condition: New. First.. 241 x 163 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Within the domain of French literary analysis, gender criticism has until now focused primarily on women s writing and has drawn largely on the writings of French feminist theorists, even though male-authored texts provide an equally revealing window through which to analyze gender. Except by mainly male critics working predominantly in the field of gay and queer studies, the issue of how maleness informs the construction of the self and the creative act more broadly has been virtually ignored. Further, even though much more work has been done on women, it can be argued that the construction of femaleness is most profitably illuminated by an approach that allows for a comparison between the sexes. This book starts with the premise that sex and gender are fundamental components of the autobiographical writing of both sexes. This is demonstrated through close readings of works by a number of twentieth-century authors who are paired, one male with one female. In tackling, amongst other things, colonial and postcolonial writing, Aids writing, the question of photography and fetishism, queer politics...
