Excerpt from The Life of Charles XII, King of Sweden: Translated From the French The Swedes retired to a part of the island called Alteferra, where there was a fort of which they were yet masters. From thence the king returned to Stralsund, obliged to abandon those brave troops who had served him so well on this occasion; and they were taken prisoners two days after. Among the prisoners was that unfortunate French regiment, composed of the re. Mains of the battle of Hochstet, which had been in the service of king Au gustus, and afterwards came into the service of the king of Sweden. Most of the soldiers were incorporated in a new regiment belonging to the prince of Anhalt s son, who was their fourth master. The commander of, this wandering regiment at Ruge n, was the same count Villelongue who so generously ventured his life for the king s service at Adrianople. He was taken with his men, and but ill rewarded hfterwards for all his services, fatigues, and misfortunes. The king, after all these prodigies of...
