Excerpt: . . . obviate the great risks and losses which the royal government might suffer in the transportation of supplies so great a distance. Still another consideration must not be overlooked; namely, the new colonies would supply recruits for the presidio garrisons, and at the same time prove a means of defence to the entire country. The law provided that each poblador, to whom house lots or lands were granted, should be obliged to hold himself equipped with two horses and a complete saddle, musket, and other arms for the defence of his particular district, subject to the call of the government. It would not be difficult to trace, in this grant of land on consideration that the receiver hold himself in readiness to defend the kings territory, something analogous to the old feudal rgime. Prior to the regulations of N eve, each settler was entitled to receive annually one hundred and twenty dollars, with food for the first two years after enlisting as a colonist, and provisions alone for the three following years. At the end of five years he might be put in full possession of the land, provided that all of the conditions had been fulfilled. By the new regulations this law was changed so as to give to each settler one hundred and sixteen dollars and seventeen and a half cents for each of the first two years, and sixty dollars per annum for each of the remaining three years. The colonists were...
