After years of honing their skills on rivers from Wisconsin to Vermont, Hayden and Mark, Ron and Tony, and solo canoeist Charlie Van Dyke arrive in Colorado for their latest whitewater adventure. Wild and remote, the Powderhorn River is everything theyd hoped it would be, and all are reveling in their latest adventure when a bear seen crossing the river leads to the capture of a being from another planet. Consumed by thoughts of fame and fortune, they hurry downriver in a race for the take-out with their headline-making captive. But the alien attempts escape, and in the scuffle that follows the canoes and their occupants are transported to the age of dinosaurs and a river utterly transformed. Struggling to believe their own eyes, the men are further shocked by the aliens assertion that the brizvas transport functions are no longer operative. Forced downriver, emotions are still raw and swirling as they carve a campsite from the wilderness. Adjusting to the new reality is not easy, and cultures clash as humans and alien fight to survive long enough to possibly be rescued. Window In Time journeys to the dangerous, if fabulously beautiful, world of the dinosaurs where they struggle to evade the beast whose territory they have unknowingly trespassed upon, their numbers shrinking even as time runs out on their efforts to return home. This item ships from La Vergne, TN. Paperback.
