She tended and watered the lovely plant, and learned to love it above all other flowers in the Garden. After the fall and banishment of our first parents from Paradise, the arbutus vine became so lonely and missed Eve so greatly that it crept down from its bower and trailed through the Garden and out into the world in search of her who loved it. It is still seeking her through woods and waste places in a search that never ends, and each springtime sends forth the delicate fragrance of its pink and white blossoms to tell of its faithfulness.
