A bazaar is often the nest egg for a small outlying chapel, when it has to content itself perhaps with but a monthly service. Substantial gifts gladden the local hospitals at Thanksgiving and Christmas, as well as at other times. The Daughters, sometimes called the Kings Daughters. sometimes after their own particular church, emulate the matrons in their church ministries; and, like them, not scorning the humbler work of cleaning and lighting fires in Gods house. They raise money, and they save money by what they gladly do with their own hands. They teach in the mission kindergartens, and start the childrens societies in the right direction. The children, whether called the Sunbeams, the Young Helpers or Little Workers, piece their quilts, voting, when complete,...
