Not illustrated. 1859 Excerpt: .to possess a delicate constitution, but an energy of character not often surpassed; her mind was active, vigorous and admirably balanced; her judgment clear and sound. She exhibited a rare knowledge of human nature and a keen insight into the motives and qualities of others. Her delicate appreciation of others rights, as well as love for their happiness, made her a safe companion, a prudent counsellor, an invaluable friend. She was refined in her feelings, warm in her attachments, steadfast in her friendships, forgiving toward them that had injured her; pure in all her conversation, and watchful over her own heart and conduct. Skilled and tasteful in her domestic arrangements, she made home attractive and happy. She loved the employments of the household, and in the intimacies of the family circle, in her relations as a daughter, a sister and a wife, her virtues shone with peculiar lustre. As a pastor s companion she never forgot the welfare of his people, and their claim upon her regard and affection. It was her constant desire to benefit and serve them. While shrinking from no duty which she owed directly to them, she ever sought their good, by heartily sympathising with her husband in all efforts in their behalf, and cooperating with him in every useful endeavor. She honored the office of an ambassador of Christ, and she felt that few duties are more responsible than those of her who is appointed to sympathise and counsel with...
