Not illustrated. 1886 Excerpt: .old man suffering imprisonment in the Tower of London, produced the first part of a great work entitled The History of the World. This part, which is only a small portion of the entire history planned by the author, fills a ponderous folio volume, and narrates the story of mankind from the creation of Adam to the death of Alexander the Great. Raleigh never completed the work, and it is probably well that he wrote no more, for the style of the narrative is not such as would be very interesting to readers; and the story is so interlarded with tedious disquisitions on all manner of theological and philosophical questions that its perusal would be, to most persons, an irksome task. The following short extract from his account of the creation of Adam will illustrate the character of these digressions:; The Fall of Adam. What means did Satan find out, or what instruments did his subtlety present him as fittest and aptest to work his mischief by? Even the unquiet vanity of woman, so as by Adam s hearkening to the voice of his wife, contrary to the express commandment of the living God, mankind by that her incantation, became the subject of labor, sorrow, and death; the woman being given to man for a comforter and companion, but not for a counselor. But if Adam in the state of perfection, and Solomon the son of David, God s chosen servant, and himself a man endured...
