

Critical Resection Length and Gap Distance in Peripheral Nerves: Experimental and Morphological Studies

By G. Orf

Springer. Paperback. Condition: New. 100 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 0.2in. The Second World War gave rise to a previously inconceivable number of peripheral nerve injuries. Only later on did these injuries occasion renewed intensive research in this field of neurosurgery. Among the factors which have promoted this development is the operating microscope with more refined surgical techniques. Of course, surgery of peripheral nerve injuries in peacetime is not to be compared with that in wartime. Only rapid wound healing enables a secondary suture to be performed at a favorable time, after about four weeks. Besides in most cases the defect of substance is not as great as in war injuries, in which the so-called critical resection length (Seddon) was the cause of the greatest difficulties and constituted the crucial obstacle to good success. The experienced surgeons of the Second World War always knew that the specified dimensions were far too great for the critical resection length. They could only resort to attempting a suture even when there was a great gap between the ends of the nerves. Precise information was not available on direct damage to the axis cylinder or alteration due to vascular factors when stretching...
