L Aleph, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Gea - My Mirror, The Earth is a transcript from the original poem in Farsi language (and the German translation of the poem, which was published by Edition I Aleph), which unfortunately due to censorship in Iran has been never published in Farsi. The transcript is a masterpiece of translation by Jeanette Skirvin. Taking into account that until today never long modern poems (odes of a volume of a whole book) have been translated and published from Farsi to English, this transcript is absolutely unique in regard to the power of poetry language and raising serious attention of a world audience to modern Iranian poetry - rather isolated after 1990. Gea is an ode to the earth and life with a strong literary momentum, melting symbols, metaphors, archetypes, nature and culture. of East and West, Orient and Oxidant, in modern times of poetry. --- If an image is worth one thousand words then that is why I reached for GEA - Blame the charming cover. The title, though scripted in a foreign tongue, did not discourage me from opening this slim little book. What met my gaze was a list of unfamiliar words tumbling down the left sides of otherwise blank pages. Words were capitalized at random. Punctuation appeared practically non-existent. There were no discernable hints as to beginnings and endings of phrases, sentences or even one paragraph. This will be easy, I thought. I ll simply pay a visit to the local college language department and beseech an esteemed linguist to interpret the content for me. What happens when time runs ahead of schedule leaving no time for leisure s chase-down of a college Professor with enough time on his hands willing...
