Not illustrated. 1902 Excerpt: .labourers; in Uganda the officers were new to each other and to the country, and many of them were new to the language and character of the Indian coolie. In Beluchistan, all India was available for the supply of transport animals, and 600 military carts and drivers were placed at the disposal of the platelaying staff; in Uganda there were no transport animals, and nearly all those imported--63 camels, 128 mules, 579 bullocks, and 774 donkeys--died from the effects of the tsetse-fly. In Beluchistan any unforeseen want could be supplied at once by railway if telegraphed for, and written explanations reached headquarters in a few days; in Uganda any unforeseen want, if telegraphed for, could not be supplied until great delay had occurred, and explanations, owing to the infrequency of the mails and the length of voyage, required usually more than a month to reach destination....
