Next Century Publishing, United States, 2011. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. The church is dying in America and with the decline of the church is a parallel decline in Christianity. As emerging generations seek to connect with others and Jesus in meaningful relationships they turn to the church to meet that need, but many churches today are not delivering. But there is also a huge disconnect between perceptions of what it means to be a Christian, follow Jesus and go to church. The Barna Group, a major voice in communicating research findings related to Christianity and culture reports that 62 of unchurched adults consider themselves to be Christians and 44 claim that they have made a personal commitment to Jesus Christ that is still important in their life today. At the same time 53 of Busters and 49 of Boomers contend t hat they are too busy to attend church. On top of the fast pace of life experienced in today? s culture, Christianity and church goers have a huge image problem. Dave Kinneman and Dave Lyons, in their book UnChristian, report on common perceptions of Christians held by those outside of faith circles. It is important to make a distinction between Christians and church goers, noting that not all individuals who go to church are followers of Jesus. It seems church may have become more of a Sunday social date rather than a way of living based on the Golden Rule.Much of the image problem has to do with how Christians and the church are perceived by those who do not attend church or identify themselves as Christians. As reported by Kinneman and Lyons, the church (the people who purport to follow Jesus) is perceived as judgmental, homophobic, arrogant and hypocritical. I imagine Jesus weeping...
