Not illustrated. 1902 Excerpt: .evidence of the correctness of such weights, is unconstitutional, because denying to the companies due process of law, and wrongfully depriving the courts of the judicial power to determine the weight and sufficiency of evidence. The decision by a bare majority of the court and the dissenting judges make out a somewhat plausible case. It is conceded, both by the majority and the minority, that a Legislature has the right to modify the rules of evidence. Statutes making certain proof, documentary or oral, merely presumptive evidence, fall within such power. When, however, a Legislature assumes to make evidence of any kind conclusive evidence, it in effect takes away the right of judicial trial of the question of fact comprehended by it. This, as we understand it, is the gist of the argument of the majority of the court, and it would seem to be sound. Will the person who exchanged a very large old cotton umbrella for a new silk one at the Methodist supper last Wednesday night, as soon as they find out the mistake, return the silk one to the owner?--Fairfield Journal. Not unless persons in Maine are diametrically different from most other persons. The person who mistakes a very large old cotton umbrella for a new silk one will prefer to continue in his delusion. ONE Granville D. Hall, who was formerly resident in West Virginia, but whose peregrinations have landed him in Ohio, has issued a book which purports to be a...
